

Improve Your Smile with Invisalign Braces

When you take care of your teeth with Invisalign braces, you stand to improve a lot more than your smile.

That is because your teeth are a part of an integrated system of health. Your feet are like your teeth in that they are often overlooked and unappreciated. But your poor foot health leads to pain in the ankles, knees, and lower back.

More than pain, you will have a hard time walking and exercising, As a result, your weight and overall fitness will suffer. When you have a problem with your feet, you need more than a pedicure.

Problems with your teeth will affect the quality, and possibly, the quantity of your life (yes – how long you will live!). You have to look beyond the price of braces which are among the more expensive treatments. And Invisalign is more expensive still. But so is a heart transplant. It is all a matter of perspective.

Orthodontists estimate 45% of children need braces to fix functional issues.

Malocclusions such as tooth bunching and jaw misalignment are often treated for cosmetic reasons. But there are much better reasons to get these problems taken care of. Even the cosmetic reasons are about a lot more than just a pretty smile:

More than a Pretty Smile

It is not vanity to want to look your best. How you look is 90% of a first impression. A person will never look better than when they prepare for a blind date. We know how important looks are. It affects everything from the job we get to the person we marry.

It also affects our confidence, which has an effect on everything else. Without cosmetic confidence, we won't smile, which might make us seem less pleasant.

Some develop the tick of placing their hand in front of their mouth, making them more muffled and giving others less reason to pay attention. The total value of these missed opportunities is incalculable.

Grade school can be brutal for less than physically perfect children.

If your child suffers from a facial deformity due to malocclusions, their future can depend on getting braces before too many opportunities pass them by.

Invisalign Braces Can Improve Oral Hygiene

It is tough to get a child to brush and floss in the best of times. If they have to deal with pain or discomfort, the task is all but impossible.

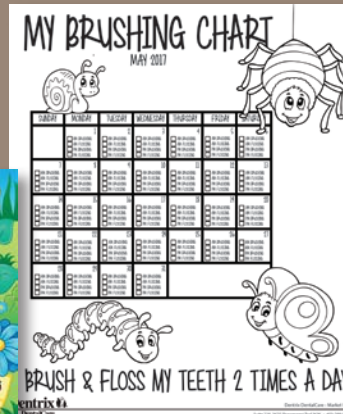

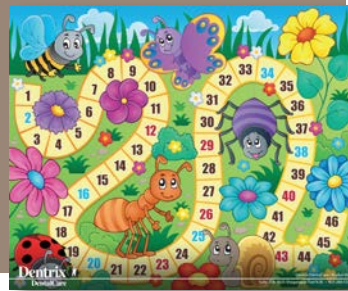

Bunched teeth keep dental floss at bay. Without the ability to floss, more detritus stays lodged in the teeth longer producing more bacteria and tooth decay.

Invisalign braces make it easy to take out the trays for eating, drinking, and performing oral hygiene. That keeps particles of food from getting stuck in the braces as can happen with metal wires.
